

Certified Organic Egyptian Golden Chamomile “Tea”

Instructions

For a soothing herbal “tea,” place one sachet of our Organic Egyptian Golden Chamomile “Tea” in a cup or teapot of pure water at approximately 185° F (85° C). This is best achieved by allowing boiling water a moment to cool before introducing the “tea” sachet. Steep for approximately 3 to 5 minutes and then allow to cool and enjoy. Of course, feel free to vary the amount of water used or modify the brewing time to adjust the strength of the “tea.” Unlike typical chamomile “tea,” prolonged brewing will not cause bitterness due to the unique quality of our Organic Egyptian Golden Chamomile blossoms.

Back in 1979, I began making vitamins for my own use when I could find no products that met my high standards for quality, purity and efficacy. These vitamins were never intended to be sold; however, some 30 years later, the same exceptional vitamins I make for my own personal use are the exact same vitamins I share with you through ProCaps Laboratories.

Today, I have created a very small family of products called “Andrew’s Own” for when, just as with vitamins 30-plus years ago, I make a product for my own use that is worthy of sharing with you. I am excited to introduce another unique member to the Andrew’s Own family.

Enjoy!

“Tea,” but not really Tea?

You will notice that we always place quotation marks around the word “tea” when referring to our Chamomile “tea.” That is because technically, Chamomile “tea” is not a true tea. It is actually an infusion and although most of us refer to it as an “herbal tea,” it is really not tea at all. Technically for something to be called “tea,” it must come from the Camellia sinensis plant. That plant is responsible for all the green, black, oolong and other varieties of tea. Beverages that are made by infusing other plants are more properly referred to as Herbal Infusions or Tisanes, but no matter what you call it, our Chamomile “Tea” is a uniquely soothing treat.

Back to Chamomile’s “Roots”

Chamomile has been cultivated in Egypt for thousands of years and not surprisingly, Egyptian Chamomile is viewed as the world’s finest. Our Organic Chamomile Blossoms are cultivated in the same nutrient-rich Egyptian soils that they have been for centuries. We use only Golden Chamomile Blossoms from an Organic-Certified source, which means they are naturally free of chemicals, additives and pesticides. Our Organic Chamomile Blossoms are unprocessed, so you get to enjoy all the pure, natural flavor and freshness of our exceptional organic Chamomile in each natural biodegradable “tea” sachet.

Mother Nature’s Calming Plant

For thousands of years, Chamomile was used traditionally throughout Europe and Asia for its soothing and relaxing properties. Chamomile gets its name from the Greek, chamos and melos, meaning “earth” and “apple” which is a reference to the fact that it grows close to the ground (earth) and it possesses an apple-like fragrance. Chamomile was a widely used relaxing remedy enjoyed by the ancient Egyptians, Greeks and Romans. Today, modern science has validated Chamomile’s calming properties that can help us with our stressful lives while also supporting restful sleep and soothing an uneasy digestive system. Chamomile’s relaxing properties, along with its sweet, delicious flavor have seen it become one of the world’s most popular, naturally caffeine-free herbal “teas.”
